The council of national defense requests the state and district committees public safety in this state and county unities of the woman's committee, to make plans now for the proper observ-ance of the 4th of July, which will include every member of every community

America is for the first time fighting shoulder to shoulder with nations of Europe and Asia in the cause of liberty and justice and it is fitting that our day of independence should be made a day for the expression of the unity of purpose which is welding nations together in the present struggle. Our citizens of foreign extraction have petitioned the president for an oppor-tunity to manifest on the 4th of July their loyalty to the United States and the cause for which it is fighting. In response to this petition the president asks all citizens of America to join with sage occurs: them in commemorating this as universal not only to national freedom but of universal freedom. The council of na-tional defense urge that each district committee in this state provide for a celebration on the 4th of July which will

The Red Cross To-day.

Now that the second war drive of the American Red Cross has passed into his-tory with the unprecedented total of last evening for Washington, where he $170,000,000 contributed by nearly 50,-000,000 individual subscribers, it is interesting to pause long enough, even in al agricultural problems. these heetic days, to consider the extraordinary change which has taken place in twelve months' time in the status of this wonderful organization.

On May 1, 1917, just before the ap pointment of the war council, the Red Cross had 486,194 members and 562 chapters. To-day, only a little more than twelve months later, the individual membership has increased to 23,000,000 adults and 10,000,000 juniors included in 10,000 chapters, with added memberships coming in daily to swell the grand total. The membership fees more than cover all administrative expenses, making it possible to devote 100 cents of evdollar contributed to war relief

A year ago the Red Cross was recognized as an important organization; today it is a national institution, second only to the governmental departments. A year ago the Red Cross required exoitation; to-day it stands as the trustee of vast money entrusted to its care by a generous and confiding public. A year ago the Red Cross stood in a position of asking for funds; to-day millions pour into its coffers spontaneously, placing upon the organization the added responsibility of administering its trust with ability and fidelity, and of ac-counting to the people for its stewardship. A year ago the public spoke of it Red Cross; to-day they say our" Red Cross. This extraordinary record is the result of the fortuitous combination of an in-creasingly insistent need and a spontaneous response—the need being emphasized by the closeness of contact which the war now makes with the American people and the response in service-quite beyond the value of the financial contribution. In our own Boston metro politan chapter, for instance, during the month of April, there were 3300 workers averaging 600 per day, and of these all but 85 were volunteer workers. What does this mean? Simply that the people of Greater Boston are putting themelves as well as their money into the cream freezer, etc., etc. Red Cross, considering the opportunity offered as coming so close to actual war service as to satisfy that desire which express wagon, wheelbarrow, horse fork, p exists in every heart.

"Service" has become the word of the hammers, wagon jacks, etc., ice in icehour. People now realize that service is house. the yard stick by which human characmeasured, and the cruelble in which human character is tested; that

The Red Cross is performing actual service which any one of us would be proud to do, could he have the opportunity; it is acting in places where we can-not go, accomplishing work which we cannot do. It is reaching our sons and brothers in the training camp, in the trenches, in the hospitals, in the German prison camps, which we cannot now reach, and is ministering to the needs of these boys with wisdom and efficiency. The Red Cross is the closest link between us over here and ours over there. We cannot consider it as an impersonal organization. When we contribute to its war fund we are giving, not to the Red Cross, but to our own flesh and blood, making use of its wonderful affiliations as a vehicle to reach those we love, When we give to its work our time, our thought, our sympathetic interest, we are coming closer in spirit to our own absent ones than in any other way.— Boston Herald.
